annum from a consulting firm—the highest placement offer to a student in Delhi University pursuing an undergraduate programme.

The college has enviable infrastructure, including a massive sports complex and a library with digital check-in/ check-out. Another striking feature is the sanitation park, SRCC's waste management facility. The idea behind it is to nudge students to think of sustainable solutions for India.

Students say there is immense focus and pressure to be corporate careerists, which veers many with different career goals into corporate life. Students joining SRCC come with various aspirations—some want to join the civil services, some want to do an MBA while several others want to go into academics. It's this motley mix of backgrounds and aspirations that makes the experience at SRCC more enriching. As principal Simrit Kaur says, the ability to adapt quickly is the key to surviving and thriving in the college. Her advice to students is to focus on what they aim to do and not what they want to become eventually. Because what you do is what you become. ■
